Jeanette Verneus-Pierre was born on August 20, 1942, and was raised in Saint-Louis-Du Nord, Haiti. Her mother Silifida Osilien Larose-Vernelus and her father Jeudi Vernelus. Her mother and father had 11 children. Jeanette was the oldest of the 11. She spent her early childhood and adolescence in Haiti helping her mother and father raise her siblings.

As she got older Jeanette had five children of her own in Haiti. Jeanette wanted to provide a better life for herself and her family, so she moved to the United States in 1980. There, she had two more children. Her last child Jeanine Verneus, was with her husband Charles Pierre.

Jeanette barely spoke English but managed to use the resources and skills she learned from Haiti to better her life in Little Haiti, FL. She became an entrepreneur, bought her home, and raised her two children that were born in Miami, FL. While raising her two daughters: Milene and Jeanine, she also provided for her children in Haiti.

Despite all of her obstacles, Jeanette was there to nurture and provide for her siblings, children, grandchildren, and so many others. She helped bring in family members from Haiti, she provided a home to not only family but friends as well. Her door was always open to anyone who needed her. She was a very selfless woman who always helped without hesitation. She helped as much as she could until she fell ill.

She will always be remembered as the resilient woman, the backbone of this family, and the provider and caretaker of the Verneus Family.
